THURSDAY .....JULY 1, 1886.

The New Hampshire Democrats. The resolutions adopted on Tuesday last by the Democrats of New Hamp shire, in State Convention assembled, mingle the past and the present in a manner worthy of note. The following resolution carries one back to ante-bellum times :

" Resolved, That the Democratic Convention of New Hampshire offers its cordial sympathy to Gladstone in his mighty struggle for home-rule in Ireland, for the double reason that it releases the people from bondage and practically asserts the Democratic doctrine upon which our Union was foundthat States have the right to regulate their own domestic affairs."

This reads as if it were part of a Democratic platform of some year prior to 1861. It was such utterances upon the part of the northern Democrats that led the people of the South to believe that at least the Democrats in the northern States would concede their right to manage their own domestic affairs in their own way. It was a grievous blunder the South made when she misconstrued the language of such resolutions-language intended to teach ment of the right of a State to secede from the Union. However, the blunder resulted in the abolition of the institution of slavery, and thus indirectly well as we can see, could not have been accomplished in any other way.

The Democrats of New Hampshire still stand upon their platform of ante-

Democrats in the North confess that the times. Why should it be necessary in of home-rule. the year 1886 to pass a resolution "recognizing the patriotism" of the soldiers and sailors of 1861? Why not " recognize the patriotism " of the solthose who fought in the war with Mexico and the last war with Great Britain? Is it not evident that the Pemocrats of New Hampshire expect BLAINE and in the presidential campaign of 1888; folk-Landmark. It would seem as if it were next to imdred millions of dollars?

himself. Such petty jealousy, such miserably small acts are degrading to himself and nobody else. The editor who permits his rival to drive him into a wrong policy is unfit for his calling. He should never do injustice to a man, or to a section, or to a cause, as a means of "spiting" his rival. We bave no sympathy with LOGAN. He is himself a bitter enemy of all so-called "rebels." We don't care how soon he is buried out of sight politically. Nevertheless, he has done nothing in the PAYNE case for which he ought not to receive praise rather than blame.

It has been left for the St. Louis Globe-Democrat to attain the most altitudinous development of sublime impudence. In a late issue it makes a raid upon CHARLES SUMNER'S ideas, and announces that "Republicanism is national and Democracy is sectional." Could there be a more stupendous example of case-hardened effrontery? "Republicanism is national," forsooth, when for a quarter of a century the Republican party has been trading upon sectional prejudice. "Republicanism is national," when the Republican leaders never lose an opportunity of appealing to sectional feeling, and even now are endeavoring to prepare the way to get another President out of that "Democracy is sectional," we allow our independent contemporary, the Boston Herald, to answer. The Herald says: "It [the Democratic party] polled more votes at the North than at the South in the last general election. It lost at the South, compared with previous years, and elected its President by gains made in former Republican States at the North. It has a majority of the Governors and a majority of the State delegations in Congress. The Democracy has faults enough, but it is

THE OLD DARKY'S NICKEL. A Colored Man Routs the Whole Stock-

Exchange Crowd.

[New York Times.] Things were dull in Wall street yesterday, when an aged colored man in a outlook for sermon illustrations. He leaned over the gallery-railing and showed his appreciation of the hurlyburly scene below-brokers wildly gesticulating and more wildly howling. It wasn't long before the sightseer was discovered, nor much longer before a matinee was arranged for his especial benefit. The average stock-broker may be a trifle wide sometimes, but when be is trying to be funny nobody is left in doubt as to his intentions. And this a spot just beneath the gallery-rails, fixed their gaze on the old gentleman above, and began to be their funniest. They sang plantation melodies and went through a lot of monkey business that to them and their fellows seemed humorous beyond all measure. The ancient observer gazed down unmoved. evidently believing the circus a part of the regular Stock Exchange routine. A hundred brokers further down the room joined in the choruses, and the visitor heard lots of things about "poor black Joe," "The Old Cabin Home," "The Fiddle and the Bow," "The Shovel and the Hoe," and lots of other things that ought to have embarrassed him. Then, as the grand and irresistible finale, one proud broker stepped forward and danced a jig.

The colored gentleman watched this with unflagging attention, too, and when the artist's heels finally rested on the floor he raised his form from its reclining position on the gallery rail, and with a most matter-of-fact air drove his forefingers into his waistcoat pocket. The audience watched and howled. Poer old darky! He was routed now. So they hugged themselvesin delusion. Out of his pocket came his forefinger, and with the forefinger came a nickel, and with a smile front of the singers and their dancer. Not poor darky! Poor singers Poor jig man! Never such a roar was colored gentleman could have had Delmonico's whole bar if he'd only waited to accept it.

Delivery of Diplomas-Speech of Judge Fenner-Governor Lee Responds to a Call.

[Reported for the Dispatch.]

UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA, UNIVERSITY OF VIRGINIA, June 30, 1886.

To-day the diplomas were delivered and the professional and academic degrees conferred in the presence of a very large audience. The platform was occupied by the Board of Visitors, members of the faculty, and distinguished alumnic Gayemor Lee occuguished alumni. Governor Lee occu-pied a seat at the right of Chairman Venable, and took great interest and pleasure in the proceedings. It was a gala time for the "boys," who were gain time for the "boys," who were marched to the front under the escort of the ushers to receive their sheep-skins, and a pleasant time for their fellow-students, who did not fail to give rounds of generous applause. The names of most of the graduates have already appeared in the Dispatch, and the remainder follow here: Civil Engineer, R. C. Berkeley, Jr., Morgantown, W. Va; N. S. Clunet, Balti-more, Md.; J. S. Miller, Dublin, Va. Mining Engineer, H. Hardaway, Chula, Va. Bachelor of Letters, James N. Anderson, of Williamston, S. C.; James W. S. Peters, University of Virginia. Bachelor of Philosophy, Alfred H. Byrd, New York, N. Y.; James W. S. Peters, University of Virginia. Master of Arts, Beauregard Boaz, Covesville, Va.; Upton W. Muir, Louisville. Ky.; James W. S. Peters, University of Virginia.

Colonel Venable announced the session of 1885-'86 at a close, and called Major Charles M. Blackford, President of the Society of the Alumni to the chair, who introduced the orator, Judge Charles E. Fenner of Louisiana. It may be added here as an interesting fact, that Judge Fenner, Major Blackford, and Senator (now Judge) Howell E. Jackson of Tennessee, were mem-bers of the class of '53. In introducing Judge Fenner, Major Blackford said that through the former the generation of thirty-three years ago would speak to the generation of to-day.

Judge Fenner said that he had been aided in his choice of a subject for his address to-day by the fact that thirtythree years ago he had stood in that place as the orator of one of the literary societies of the University. Then he had gone a little beyond the dictum that all possible good would come to pass, and proclaimed that all good was possible, and that there is an immortal Spirit and a hereafter. He stood here to-day, after the lapse of many years, to testify that the faith of his youth is unchanged and unchangeable. This is time when the philosophy of the commonplace is despised, when reverence is a lost art, and eccentricity a virtuea day of strange doctrine, whose shib-boleth is "I know that I know nothing." He then discussed ably the various forms of philosophical unbelief and replied to some of their assaults upon religion.

At the close of Judge Fenner's address Governor Lee was called for. Major Blackford said: "I heard that call for Lee. When the sons of the University assemble what could be more appropriate than that the Governor of the State should be in their midst, and what could be more appropriate than that that Governor should be named Lee?"

Governor Lee said: "I heard that call for Lee, too. [Laughter.] I also saw Colonel Venable motion to the band, and I am very much obliged to Professor Weber for the lively air he on to make a speech in a medical convention, and just as I arose the band struck up 'Nearer, My God, To Thee. [Laughter.] And I was lead to my fate among all those doctors in a highly nervous state." He said that it had been years since he had been to the University. Then he was fresh from Appomattox with his parole in his pocket, and upon entering this hall had been called upon for a speech. Then he had " nothing more to say, which was better than this speech." Since that time there had been many changes and the chaplets of victory for the South have been missing, but no land is superior to ours, and no great general, from Gustavus Adolphus to Wellington, had led grander soldiers. He had come here to testify to his interest in education, as he believed it to be the duty of the Executive of the State to show his interest in the State's system of education. A great work is being done here and a glorious light is shed over the State from this place by the splendid graduates it sends out. It is said that the State contributes largely to the support of this school, but does not the University contribute to the State? When the balance-sheet is drawn it will be seen that the University of Virginia does not owe the State of Virginia, but that the State owes the University.

When Governor Lee took his seat a bugle call rang through the hall in compliment to the gallant cavalryman which was followed by deafening ap-plause. As the applause subsided the band struck up with "Dixie," the cheers were renewed, and for a time the scene was a very animated one.

To-night the final ball occurs, the last festivity of this celebration season. This commencement is ir nearly every respect an improvement on others o late years. The music has been good, the speeches good, the attendance good. The illuminations of lawns and buildings has added no little to the comfort and pleasure of the crowds who have thronged the place nightly.
